This lecture will portray citizen diplomacy at its best by exploring health diplomacy: what is it, what it is not - and its relevance today describing “real life” public health practice in Indonesia (Banda Aceh), China (Shanghai and Sichuan Province), Egypt (Cairo), Iraq (Basrah), Nicaragua (Corinto) and the U.S. (Mississippi).

Dr. Howe is a well-recognized expert in international medicine and a humanitarian leader. He is the former President and CEO of Project HOPE, an international health education and humanitarian assistance foundation, which operated more than 70 programs in 45 countries on 5 continents. Previously, he was the President of the University of Texas Health Science Center at San Antonio, where he held the Distinguished Chair in Health Policy and is now President Emeritus.

He is a Board member of Millendo Therapeutics, MAXIMUS Federal, Boston University, the Texas Biomedical Research Institute and the Mary Christie Foundation.

His numerous honors and awards include the Surgeon General's Service Award, the U.S. Army Commander's Award for Public Service, the Magnolia Award from the City of Shanghai and honorary degrees from Jefferson University and the University of Massachusetts. He is a published author of numerous articles, chapters and abstracts in peer-reviewed medical journals, including the New England Journal of Medicine and the Annals of Internal Medicine. Dr. Howe has a bachelor's degree from Amherst College, earned his medical degree from the Boston University School of Medicine and later completed the Health Systems Management Program at the Harvard Business School. He is Board Certified in both Internal Medicine and Cardiovascular Disease.

The James E. Dalen, MD, MPH, Distinguished Lecture for Health Policy – The endowment for the James E. Dalen Distinguished Lecture for Health Policy supports a series of visiting professors in health policy. These distinguished scholars offer lectures and discussions to our campus community and to the public on local, state, national and international health policy issues and connect the academic world with the “real world” of public health. James E. Dalen, MD, MPH, ScD (hon) has been a member of the University of Arizona faculty since 1988. He served as Dean of the College of Medicine from 1988 to 2001, and Vice President for Health Sciences from 1995 to 2001. Dr. Dalen is Dean Emeritus of the UA College of Medicine and Professor Emeritus of the UA Mel and Enid Zuckerman College of Public Health.
